Construction Law
Construction Contracts 101
Common Risk-Shifting Provisions in Construction Contracts and Subcontracts

The course will address the various types of common contract clauses appearing in construction contracts and subcontracts that shift the risk of non-performance by third parties or other contracting parties. After learning about the various risk-shifting clauses, their meanings, and how to identify them (e.g., choice-of-law provisions, no-damages-for-delay clauses, arbitration clauses, conditional payment clauses, pass-through clauses, offset provisions, and liquidated damages clause to name a few), attendees will be taught about the various ways such clauses interplay and their real world application.

Learning Objectives/ Outcomes:

- Understand the function of risk-shifting clauses – why do they exist and why should you use them?
- How to identify the risk-shifting clauses in a contract – where to look and how to identify them.
- Enforceability of particular clauses – know the law.
- Contract negotiation tactics – how to utilize risk-shifting clauses to your advantage.

Target Audience: Contractors, subcontractors, and project owners.
